

Fiscally responsible AMT relief

By Rep. Stephanie Herseth Sandlin

December 14, 2007

As we head toward the final days of 2007, the House of Representatives is again c

Unfortunately, however, some in Congress prefer an AMT relief bill that continues

We can no longer afford to ignore the price we pay every day for increasing the na

As a member of the Blue Dog Coalition, I am a strong supporter of the new House

Too many in Congress pay mere lip service to fiscal responsibility and ignore the f

So when those who oppose paying for AMT relief, thereby preferring to borrow bill

Our nation's debt has skyrocketed to more than $9 trillion dollars. That works out t

But, the debt itself is not the end of our budget woes. As anyone who has ever bor

The votes in this

Congress on AMT relief give those who preach fiscal discipline th